$97,010 Fund Allocated For Conservation Here

Pickaway County farmers participating in the 1950 agricultural conservation program will be eligible to share in a $97,010 distribution.

Last year the Pickaway County share in conservation aid was

4 Men Nabbed In Theft Of Aga Khan Gems

MARSEILLE, Jan. 20—Four men accused of the tommygun $450,000 jewel robbery of the Aga Khan were jailed in lightning raids today, and French security police threw up roadblocks all along the Riviera in an attempt to retrieve the gems.

Police said the leader of the gang and his girl friend had been murdered in a violent dispute over dividing up the loot.

The break in one of Europe's biggest holdups came as the result of a "tip" from a police informer named Leon Jolivet, who also was held by police.

The two men believed to have the jewels taken from the Aga Khan and his wife last Aug. 3 as they motored near Cannes were being

Methodists Ask No Rome Envoy

CINCINNATI, Jan. 20—The Methodist church today urged President Truman not to appoint another ambassador to the Vatican.

The General Board of Evangelism of the church unanimously adopted a resolution requesting that there be no replacement for Myron Taylor, who resigned as this nation's representative to the Catholic church in Rome.

Boasting Army GI Is Held In Huge Boston Robbery

BOSTON, Jan. 20—An Army corporal, who allegedly boasted to his girl friend a month ago that he was "going to make a million dollars on an armored truck job," was seized in New York today in connection with Boston's $1,500,000 express company robbery.

Boston police announced that the soldier was taken into custody by police and Army authorities in a veterans' hospital.

After hours of grilling he was subjected to lie tests. The girl also was questioned.

This development came as four more canvas money bags were found, bringing the total recovered to seven.

Police said the bags had been discarded only briefly before they were found.

Two were found on the driveway of a Milton estate. One of these bore the markings of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. The third, marked "Federal Reserve Bank - 8863" was found on railroad tracks in Lowell.

Discovery of the bags followed publication by the FBI of the serial numbers of almost $100,000 worth of Federal Reserve bank money taken in the biggest cash robbery in American crime history.

The FBI also questioned two small boys who claimed to have seen the nine bandits in action.

Other developments: It was reported the key with which the bandits entered Brink's strong room has been traced by the FBI and may lead to identity of the bandits. FBI agents seized all keys to the ar-

Big Inch Line Blows

Noble County Farm Buildings Damaged

CALDWELL, Jan. 20—The Big Inch gas pipeline exploded and wrecked a set of farm buildings early today seven miles northeast of here in Noble County.

No one was reported injured.

The resulting fire rose to a height of some 250 feet at its inception and could be seen from a distance of about ten miles. It let go at 3:25 a. m.

Fire departments from Cambridge and Caldwell rushed to the scene and managed to save several other houses in the tiny community of Bond Ridge, where the blast occurred.

Mrs. Almada Stotsberry, telephone operator at Saratoville, said the window panes in some of the houses were too hot to touch.

Destroyed in the blast and the resulting fire were the house, barn and outbuildings on the C. F. Elliott farm. They were not occupied at the time.

VALVES ON BOTH sides of the blaze were turned off by pipemen of the Texas Eastern Pipeline, operators of the 24-inch line, who rushed to the scene from the division point in Somerset.

It was the second explosive break in the Big Inch line in the last year. Last Summer the line exploded about two and a half miles west of the latest accident.

An official of Texas Eastern said the explosion and fire will cause no interruption in natural gas service.

Chinese Reds Demand UN Seat

LAKE SUCCESS, Jan. 20—UN Secretary General Trygve Lie announced today that the Chinese Communist government has formally demanded China's seat at the Security Council and full membership accreditation.

Lie disclosed that Chinese Foreign Minister Chou En-lai named Chang Wen-tien as chief of the Communist UN delegation and demanded the immediate expulsion of the Nationalist team.

He asked a federal district court to prohibit Lewis from calling strikes or slowdowns in support of these allegedly illegal demands.

Fund withholding action by the operators, if miners follow precedent, would in all likelihood squash any back-to-work movement being urged by UMW district leaders, and result in all of the nation's miners leaving the pits.

Some 83,000 miners in five more car company's building in the north end.

AUTHORITIES in Pennsylvania notified investigators in Boston that a man implicated in numerous holdups in Pennsylvania had jumped bail in Pittsburgh while awaiting an appeal from a jail sentence. Pittsburgh police said he left that city two days before the Brink's robbery and was believed headed toward Boston.

The several numbers given out by the FBI covered 24,051 bills ranging in denomination from $1 to $1,000. These serial numbers were considered the best hope thus far for capture of the masked gang that raided the Brink's vault Tuesday night.

LONDON SAYS BRITISH DISLIKES YANKEE MOVE

U.S. Concedes 'Mistake,' Reports Ready To Recognize Franco Spain

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—The United States conceded today it has made a mistake on its policy toward Spain and is now prepared to resume full diplomatic relations with the Franco regime.

The administration's attitude was set forth in a letter from Secretary of State Acheson to Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The statement of U. S. policy implied that Spain might soon be taken into the North Atlantic Alliance.

And it also promised credits for the government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, but only for specific and sound projects.

Acheson said that the U. S. is ready to resume full diplomatic relations with Spain and will vote for termination of the United Nations ban on having ambassadors assigned to that country.

IN LONDON, Britain bared a major policy difference with the

U. S. with the announcement that it has "no intention" of sending an ambassador to Spain.

The foreign office referred to the statement by Acheson that the U. S. is willing to vote for an end to the United Nations "boycott" of Spain. The foreign office statement said:

"His majesty's government has no intention of sending an ambassador to Madrid for reasons stated by Minister of State Hector McNeil when the resolution was discussed by the United Nations on May 16."

Acheson in his letter to Connally declared that the withdrawal of ambassadors from Madrid was a "mistake."

It had been anticipated before that this action, adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1946, might lead to the overthrow of Franco.

Instead, Acheson indicated, this action had led to a stronger determination of the Spanish people not to let outside powers interfere with internal policy of Spain.

Acheson said that "there is no sign of an alternative to the present government in Spain" although the UN action was designed to promote a more democratic regime in the country.

THE SECRETARY also stated that the U. S. had voted for the diplomatic ban only in the interest of harmony in supporting the UN.

At that time, Moscow had demanded a complete political and economic boycott of Franco. It supported the diplomatic move, proposed by Britain, as the lesser of two evils.

Acheson restricted his commitments on economic aid for Franco by saying that Spain would be eligible for Export-Import Bank loans only if specific projects were submitted which met legal requirements.

He also asserted that Spain must strengthen its financial structure and remove customs and investment restrictions before it can look for an American loan.

$97,010 Fund Allocated For Conservation Here

Pickaway County farmers participating in the 1950 agricultural conservation program will be eligible to share in a $97,010 distribution.

John G. Boggs, chairman of the local Production and Marketing Administration, said the 1950 allotment for local conservationists is nine percent above last year's allotment, which will be distributed after Feb. 1.

Last year the Pickaway County share in conservation aid was only $88,280, which is to be divided next month by local farmers who followed their contracts for soil conservation practices.

Boggs pointed out that farmers who participated in the 1949 program and who want to share in the 1950 allotment should sign up in the local PMA office before the Feb. 1 deadline.

THE CONSERVATION money will be paid out to farmers who agree to spread so much lime and fertilizer during the year, install tile, dig open drainage ditches or perform several other conservation requirements.

According to figures released by the local PMA office the 1950 figure for Pickaway County tops all of the allotments for surrounding counties during the year.

Allotments for the counties neighboring Pickaway are: Ross, $89,600; Hocking, $29,100; Fairfield, $82,590; Fayette, $82,590; Franklin, $76,270; and Madison, $90,990.

The 1950 allotment will be divided up here after Feb. 1, 1951.

U.S. Exports Set New Record In Four Years

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—President Truman reported to congress today that the United States has exported a record-smashing $67 billion worth of goods and services in the four years since the end of the war.

The chief executive submitted a report by the National Advisory Council on international monetary and financial problems which revealed that post-war foreign aid by the U. S. totaled $23 billion, 310 million dollars according to last June 30.

According to the report, exports were only partially balanced by imports totaling $35 billion during the four-year period, leaving the U. S. with a favorable trade balance of $32 billion. Such a trade balance is unparalleled in world history.

Big Inch Line Blows

Noble County Farm Buildings Damaged

CALDWELL, Jan. 20—The Big Inch gas pipeline exploded and wrecked a set of farm buildings early today seven miles northeast of here in Noble County.

No one was reported injured.

The resulting fire rose to a height of some 250 feet at its inception and could be seen from a distance of about ten miles. It let go at 3:25 a. m.

Fire departments from Cambridge and Caldwell rushed to the scene and managed to save several other houses in the tiny community of Bond Ridge, where the blast occurred.

Mrs. Almada Stotsberry, telephone operator at Sarahsville, said the window panes in some of the houses were too hot to touch.

Destroyed in the blast and the resulting fire were the house, barn and outbuildings on the C. F. Elliott farm. They were not occupied at the time.

VALVES ON BOTH sides of the blaze were turned off by pipemen of the Texas Eastern Pipeline, operators of the 24-inch line, who rushed to the scene from the division point in Somerset.

It was the second explosive break in the Big Inch line in the last year. Last summer the line exploded about two and a half miles west of the latest accident.

An official of Texas Eastern said the explosion and fire will cause no interruption in natural gas service.

Chinese Reds Demand UN Seat

LAKE SUCCESS, Jan. 20—UN Secretary General Trygve Lie announced today that the Chinese Communist government has formally demanded China's seat at the Security Council and full membership accreditation.

Lie disclosed that Chinese Foreign Minister Chou En-lai named Chang Wen-tien as chief of the Communist UN delegation and demanded the immediate expulsion of the Nationalist team.

4 Men Nabbed In Theft Of Aga Khan Gems

MARSEILLE, Jan. 20—Four men accused of the tommygun $450,000 jewel robbery of the Aga Khan were jailed in lightning raids today, and French security police threw up roadblocks all along the Riviera in an attempt to retrieve the gems.

Police said the leader of the gang and his girl friend had been murdered in a violent dispute over dividing up the loot.

The break in one of Europe's biggest holdups came as the result of a "tip" from a police informer named Leon Jolivet, who also was held by police.

Methodists Ask No Rome Envoy

CINCINNATI, Jan. 20—The Methodist church today urged President Truman not to appoint another ambassador to the Vatican.

The General Board of Evangelism of the church unanimously adopted a resolution requesting that there be no replacement for Myron Taylor, who resigned as this nation's representative to the Catholic church in Rome.

Boasting Army GI Is Held In Huge Boston Robbery

BOSTON, Jan. 20—An Army corporal, who allegedly boasted to his girl friend a month ago that he was "going to make a million dollars on an armored truck job," was seized in New York today in connection with Boston's $1,500,000 express company robbery.

Boston police announced that the soldier was taken into custody by police and Army authorities in a veterans' hospital.

After hours of grilling he was subjected to lie tests. The girl also was questioned.

This development came as four more canvas money bags were found, bringing the total recovered to seven.

Police said the bags had been discarded only briefly before they were found.

Two were found on the driveway of a Milton estate. One of these bore the markings of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. The third, marked "Federal Reserve Bank - 8863" was found on railroad tracks in Lowell.

Discovery of the bags followed publication of the FBI of the serial numbers of almost $100,000 worth of Federal Reserve bank money taken in the biggest cash robbery in American crime history.

The FBI also questioned two small boys who claimed to have seen the nine bandits in action.

Other developments: It was reported the key with which the bandits entered Brink's strong room has been traced by the FBI and may lead to identity of the bandits. FBI agents seized all keys to the armored car company's building in the north end.

AUTHORITIES in Pennsylvania notified investigators in Boston that a man implicated in numerous holdups in Pennsylvania had jumped bail in Pittsburgh while awaiting an appeal from a jail sentence. Pittsburgh police said he left that city two days before the Brink's robbery and was believed headed toward Boston.

The several numbers given out by the FBI denominated 24,051 bills ranging in denomination from $1 to $1,000. These serial numbers were considered the best hope thus far for capture of the masked gang that captured the masked Brink's strong room.

U.S. Defense Secretary Asking Extension Of Draft

LONDON SAYS BRITISH DISLIKES YANKEE MOVE

U.S. Concedes 'Mistake,' Reports Ready To Recognize Franco Spain

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—The United States conceded today it has made a mistake on its policy toward Spain and is now prepared to resume full diplomatic relations with the Franco regime.

The administration's attitude was set forth in a letter from Secretary of State Acheson to Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The statement of U. S. policy implied that Spain might soon be taken into the North Atlantic Alliance.

And it also promised credits for the government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, but only for specific and sound projects.

Acheson said that the U. S. is ready to resume full diplomatic relations with Spain and will vote for termination of the United Nations ban on having ambassadors assigned to that country.

IN LONDON, Britain bared a major policy difference with the

U. S. with the announcement that it has "no intention" of sending an ambassador to Spain.

The foreign office referred to the statement by Acheson that the U. S. is willing to vote for an end to the United Nations "boycott" of Spain. The foreign office statement said:

"His majesty's government has no intention of sending an ambassador to Madrid for reasons stated by Minister of State Hector McNeil when the resolution was discussed by the United Nations on May 16."

Acheson in his letter to Connally declared that the withdrawal of ambassadors from Madrid was a "mistake."

It had been anticipated before that this action, adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1946, might lead to the overthrow of Franco.

Instead, Acheson indicated, this action had led to the Spanish people not to let outside powers interfere with internal policy of Spain.

Acheson said that "there is no

sign of an alternative to the present government in Spain" although the UN action was designed to promote a more democratic regime in the country.

THE SECRETARY also stated that the U. S. had voted for the diplomatic ban only in the interest of harmony in supporting the UN.

At that time, Moscow had demanded a complete political and economic boycott of Franco. It supported the diplomatic move, proposed by Britain, as the lesser of two evils.

Acheson restricted his commitments on economic aid for Franco by saying that Spain would be eligible for Export-Import Bank loans only if specific projects were submitted which met legal requirements.

He also asserted that Spain must strengthen its financial structure and remove customs and investment restrictions before it can look for an American loan.

AFTER CONFERRING an hour behind closed doors in Rome's Quirinal Palace, Premier Alcide de Gasperi (left) and President Luigi Einaudi leave the building. At their meeting, the men are reported to have satisfactorily resolved the crisis which had caused the De Gasperi cabinet to resign. The premier was asked to form a new cabinet.

PACIFIC POWER TO BE AIM?

Russ Developing Ice-Free Ports In North Korea

TOKYO, Jan. 20—Russia was reliably reported today developing two strategic ice-free ports in North Korea on a scale indicating her determination to become a major Pacific sea power.

Well-documented reports of the Russia action reaching Tokyo have given American intelligence officers frank concern and the matter will be discussed when the joint chiefs of staff meet with Gen. Douglas MacArthur in February.

The information was pointed up by the recent report of the authoritative Jane's Fighting Ships that Russia has completed or is about to complete three 35,000-ton battleships in addition to a large number of submarines.

THE TWO north Korean ports at Gensan and Joshin were leased by Russia for 30 years in an agreement with the Soviet-dominated North Korean government in 1948.

Both ports are located on the Japan Sea, facing the rugged, undeveloped western coast of Japan. Both are close to Vladivostok, the main Russian naval base which is clogged with ice during the winter.

Gensan is the larger of the two. Joshin is 190 miles northeast.

With the Russians now holding the Kurile Islands, ships from the two ports would have easy access to the Pacific, far north of Japan.

Since the Russians took over the two ports, they have been quietly improving on what the Japanese had done during their occupation. Americans now know, for example, that the Russians have built machine-shops adequate in size to service big surface warships.

Edison Day Is Scheduled

COLUMBUS, Jan. 20—Ohio's most famous inventor was honored uniquely today by Governor Lausche in a proclamation setting Feb. 11 as Thomas Alva Edison Day.

The governor asked all Ohioans to observe the day, the 103rd anniversary of Edison's birth, and "to contemplate the innumerable benefits which have accrued to this country from the work of this man."

Politburo 'Shocked' By Move

Johnson Outlines Stand To Congress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—Defense Secretary Johnson asked Congress today to extend the draft for three years and declared that the peacetime Selective Service law was a "thunderous shock to the men in the Politburo."

Johnson appeared before the House Armed Services Committee in support of President Truman's recommendation that Selective Service be continued until July 1, 1953, even though the draft is not being used, Johnson said.

"We know on the observations of our ambassador to Moscow that passage of the 1948 Selective Service act came as a thunderous shock to the men in the Politburo."

"I do not hesitate to go on record that it was one of the decisive factors in stopping the spread of Communism in Europe in 1948."

Johnson listed four reasons why the draft should be continued:

1. It will do much toward the maintenance of world peace by showing the continuing intention of the world's greatest nation to protect that peace.

2. IN EVENT of war, full mobilization could be underway in three months, instead of seven months that would be required if the law were not on the books.

3. It will guarantee a strong military posture. Johnson said the existence of the law has a "stimulating" effect on enlistments.

4. It will assist in the maintenance of strong reserve forces. Shorter periods of active service are permitted for men who join in reserves.

Although he appealed for a full continuation of the draft which expires June 24, Johnson is reportedly ready to accept a congressional compromise which would "skeletonize" the draft machinery and place it on a "stand-by" basis.

Federal Jury To Try Again In Hiss Case

NEW YORK, Jan. 20—Federal court jurors will try for the second time today to determine who lied: Alger Hiss or Whittaker Chambers.

The second perjury trial of Hiss, the former top State Department aide, is scheduled to go to a jury of eight women and four men late today after Assistant U. S. District Attorney Thomas F. Murphy sums up for the prosecution.

Claude B. Cross, soft-spoken defense counsel, asked the jury yesterday to "put the stamp of honesty and innocence" on his client during a summation lasting nearly five hours.

He suggested that not Hiss but Henry Julian Wadleigh and an unidentified "thief" in the State Department had supplied Chambers with the secret documents the former Communist courier says he got from Hiss for transmission.

Potato Eyeing Champion Named

CINCINNATI, Jan. 20—Ladies and gentlemen, a new world's champion—Potato Eyer Albert Auchman of New York.

A potato eyer is a guy who cuts eyes out of spuds so they can be made into potato chips. Seems the job must be done by hand.

Auchman, who was named champ at the annual convention of the National Potato Institute here, has been on the job for 26 years. He boasts a record of 24,000 potatoes a day—that's 3,000 an hour, 50 every minute. He figures he's eyed 177,760,000 potatoes in his time.

The boys, according to the Record, saw the masked men throw the loot into a truck and then speed off toward Boston's west end in a sedan.

Police did pin some hope, however, on an investigation of Boston's "party-girls." They theorized that the gunmen may be spending some of their money on entertainment.

ACCORDINGLY, a close watch was maintained on the apartments of a number of "glitter girls" which—free-spending underworld figures—visit for celebrations.

The police also mapped a concentrated search of towns on the New England coast. They noted that the crime scene was not far from the waterfront and speculated on the possibility that they might have used a boat in their getaway.

Strengthening this theory, in the minds of police, was the fact that knots used in tying up the five Brink's employees in the firm's vault were of a nautical type, and that all bandits wore Navy peacoats.

Man, 20, Bound To Grand Jury In Theft Case

Herman David Walton, 20, of 838 Clinton street, was bound to Pickaway County grand jury on $500 bond Thursday in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root on an accusation of breaking and entering.

Walton, known also as Jack Diltz, is charged with breaking into the Barthelmas wrecking yard office Tuesday and stealing $10 in change from its hiding place.

The man was arrested Wednesday by London police, who took him into custody for operating an auto with faulty brakes. The London lawmen notified Sheriff Charles Radcliff, who reported Walton confessed when the sheriff and Deputy Walter Richards took him into custody.

Walton is being held in Pickaway County jail for failure to pay bond.

sought. They were identified as Paul Leca and a man named Vincileona.

The four men held along with Jolivet were Paul Mondolini, nabbed in Paris; Marcel Ruberti, Francois Sanna and Jacques Benedetti, grabbed in the police net here.

POLICE SAID that Jolivet owned a villa near the one occupied by the Aga. Rita Hayworth's father-in-law, at Let Cannel and that he had timed the Aga's movements for several days before the robbery.

Ruberti, police said, rode a bicycle and intercepted the Aga's car to make it slow down at a pre-arranged point. A car driven by Roger Senanedj, the gang leader, was waiting there.

Mondolini and Benedetti assertedly held up the Aga while Sanna took a bag containing the jewels from the Begum, the Aga's wife.

HELP FOR ALL

The March of Dimes, now under way, needs funds urgently. The unprecedented devastation, wrought last year by infantile paralysis, virtually depleted the resources of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. As the epidemic raged throughout the nation, $100,000 a day was spent to care for the stricken. No plea for help went unanswered. But today the financial reservoir of the National Foundation is at a critical low. It must be replenished to assure continued aid to the victims of this crippling disease. Give—give generously today to the March of Dimes.

Vocal solos were given by Beverly Reid who sang, "God, Be Merciful to Me" and Ruth Troutman who sang, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

A brass quartet composed of Charles Magill, Warren Leist, Robert Chafin and Truman Eberly presented, "Neopolitan Nights," "Ship of Dreams" and "Prayer Perfect." A trombone solo, "Three Moods" was given by Chafin.

March Of Dimes Tag Day Booked For Saturday

Saturday will be "tag day" on the streets of Circleville.

The "tag day" operation is an annual feature of the Pickaway County March of Dimes campaign, one day of personal solicitation of everyone who walks upon the streets.

This year's tag day operations will be conducted by a group of 15 Circleville schoolgirls, according to Ed Amey, campaign manager for the local drive.

Amey said the girls will ask contributions from every one, and that they will hand out metal bangles to all who donate to the fund.

Meanwhile, a house-to-house canvas is being completed, and county homes are being solicited by a committee directed by John G. Boggs, head of the Pickaway County Production and Marketing Administration office.

In addition, coin cards have been sent to all schools to gather contributions from the children. Each of the cards is slotted so that five dimes may be placed in each card.

Local business and industry, church groups and lodges and clubs are to receive pleas for funds from the national headquarters this year, instead of personal solicitation.

sought. They were identified as Paul Leca and a man named Vincileona.

The four men held along with Jolivet were Paul Mondolini, nabbed in Paris; Marcel Ruberti, Francois Sanna and Jacques Benedetti, grabbed in the police net here.

POLICE SAID that Jolivet owned a villa near the one occupied by the Aga, Rita Hayworth's father-in-law, at Let Cannel and that he had timed the Aga's movements for several days before the robbery.

Ruberti, police said, rode a bicycle and intercepted the Aga's car to make it slow down at a pre-arranged point. A car driven by Roger Senanedi, the gang leader, was waiting there.

Mondolini and Benedetti assertedly held up the Aga while Sanna took a bag containing the jewels from the Begum, the Aga's wife.

HELP FOR ALL

The March of Dimes, now under way, needs funds urgently. The unprecedented devastation wrought last year by infantile paralysis, virtually depleted the resources of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. As the epidemic raged throughout the nation, $100,000 a day was spent to care for the stricken. No plea for help went unanswered. But today the financial reservoir of the National Foundation is at a critical low. It must be replenished to assure continued aid to the victims of this crippling disease. Give—give generously today to the March of Dimes.

Music Program Is Heard By Lutheran Men

Sixty-four members and three guests of Trinity Lutheran Brotherhood heard a program of music at a meeting Thursday evening held in parish house.

President Maynard Matz announced that an application for membership would be sent to Federated Brotherhood of America.

Harold Anderson and his committee served refreshments in the diningroom after which the musical program was presented under leadership of Truman Eberly.

The Circleville high school girls' sextet sang "Chimes of Spring," "With a Heigh and a Hi and a Ho-Ho-Ho," "Wooden Shoes," "The Night Song," "Beside Still Waters" and "I Heard the Voice of Jesus."

Vocal solos were given by Beverly Reid who sang, "God, Be Merciful to Me" and Ruth Troutman who sang, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

A brass quartet composed of Charles Magill, Warren Leist, Robert Chafin and Truman Eberly presented, "Neapolitan Nights," "Ship of Dreams" and "Prayer Perfect." A trombone solo, "Three Moods" was given by Chafin.

March Of Dimes Tag Day Booked For Saturday

Saturday will be "tag day" on the streets of Circleville.

The "tag day" operation is an annual feature of the Pickaway County March of Dimes campaign, one day of personal solicitation of everyone who walks upon the streets.

This year's tag day operations will be conducted by a group of 15 Circleville schoolgirls, according to Ed Amey, campaign manager for the local drive.

Amey said the girls will ask contributions from everyone, and that they will hand out metal bangles to all who donate to the fund.

Meanwhile, a house-to-house canvas is being completed, and county homes are being solicited by a committee directed by John G. Boggs, head of the Pickaway County Production and Marketing Administration office.

In addition, coin cards have been sent to all schools to gather contributions from the children. Each of the cards is slotted so that five dimes may be placed in each card.

Local business and industry, church groups and lodges and clubs are to receive pleas for funds from the national headquarters this year, instead of personal solicitation.

TO BALANCE OR NOT

THERE seems to be little question that the issue of the balanced budget is to be one of the liveliest ones of the present session of Congress. Almost everyone in Wash- ington, it appears, has something to say about it. A House-Senate banking subcom- mittee, which has been studying govern- ment fiscal, monetary and credit policies, put into its report a statement of opposition to the idea that government income and spending should be balanced every year. It did add that Congress should pursue an "unrelenting" quest for economy.

The subcommittee is right in saying that the budget cannot be balanced every year, come what may. The government can be expected to have to borrow once in a while, just as an individual has to do. But we seem now to have gone to the opposite ex- treme, and to be operating on the idea that government spending and income do not have to be brought into balance in any year. That would be a wonderful way to run the family budget, but unfortunately it won't work out there. It won't work out in government, either.

We have made it too easy for the govern- ment to borrow money. We have permitted Congress to get the borrowing habit, and some day we shall pay through the nose for our profligate national living now. The longer it goes on, the more dearly we shall have to pay when the day of reckoning can no longer be put off.

PRICES BY AGREEMENT

ONE reason why anti-trust enthusiasts look with suspicion on all price agreements among sellers is to be found in a recent case in Philadelphia. Five large depart- ment stores were brought to court under the Sherman Act because of an agreement which did not fix a price for any item but only provided that certain price endings in odd cents would not be used. Readily ad- mitting the agreement, the stores said the intent was not to fix or raise prices but only to simplify pricing, and light sen- tences meted out by the presiding judge in- dicated that he was persuaded that the in- tent was, indeed, honest.

Government prosecutors, however, were able to claim, and without rebuttal, that in every instance of a price affected by this agreement the price was increased, and that in no case was there a price reduction under its terms. Thus, no matter how inno- cent the purposes of the agreement, the re- sult was an increase in the cost of goods to the customers of the stores.

An increase in consumer cost is likely to be the effect of any agreement among pri- vate concerns or any action of government which tends to restrict or limit either com- petition or production.

George E. Sokolsky's
These Days

It may be possible for Dr. Hermann San- der to argue, or even to establish in a court of law, that when he gave Mrs. Abbie Bor- roto a hypodermic injection of air, he knew that she would soon die; that he saved her a few hours of agony; that his purposes were compassionate. Certainly the man is essentially honest and scrupulous, for he noted that he had given his patient a dose of "10 cc. of air," a fatal dose when in- jected into an artery.

Thus, Dr. Sander made euthanasia, or "mercy killing," a matter for judicial pro- cedure. Should he be convicted, there is a possibility that the case will go up to the Supreme Court of the United States for fi- nal determination.

But what will it be that the courts may ultimately decide? It can only be whether any man is entitled to private judgment in ending the life of another, even for com- passionate reasons.

Certainly, this was a difficult decision to make for a man of the high character, as all his neighbors attest, of Dr. Sander. He wearied of Mrs. Borroto's suffering and he eased her out. Whether that is a more gen- eral practise than we know, no one can say. We are in the hands of our physicians whose object is to heal and cure, not to act as the angel of death.

Who is to say that a cure will never be found for cancer? Actually many sufferers of cancer are now cured. When my father was my present age, diabetes was a dread- ed illness. Today, one who has this disabil- ity can with care and obedience to simple rules, live a useful life to ripe old age.

For instance, Edda Ciano announces, ap- parently with pride, that she was born be- fore her father, Benito Mussolini, married her mother.

Aly Khan, in a moment of garrulous men- dacity, announces earlier than anyone could scientifically know that his wife would give birth to a premature baby. Then there is all the commotion about In- grid Bergman being pregnant while she is married to one man with whom she is not living and is associating with another man to whom she is not married.

All this is supposed to be romantic but it violates our basic morals which come to us from the Ten Commandments and upon which stands the whole of our civilization. It is unfortunate enough that we are frail and err and misbehave; it is unfortunate that we cannot and do not live up to our principles and ideals.

The right of free choice is not contested when a society defends itself against the evils which may result from such exercise of private judgment as can destroy society itself.

While anyone may own, in our free so- ciety, an automobile and drive it, he is nevertheless subject to taking a test for a license, and he is required to pay attention to red and green lights and to other traf- fic regulations. While the road is open, it is not open to destruction. Although ours is a free society, it is not an anarchy, where each one does as he chooses, no matter what he does to others.

So, euthanasia involves the fundamental question as to who has the right to kill a person because that person is "incurably" ill? A judgment that involves such final- ity cannot be the province of one man, whatever his vocation.

KINGSRIDGE

by Alice Ross Colver

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

AND IT was strive and strain in the plant, too. For, rightly or wrongly, Gerry and come to the conclusion that a promotion there would give Judge King proof of what he wanted regarding him. As fast as Gerry was moved up, Steven's attitude toward him would thaw. The trick, then, was to force such a promotion as soon as possible.

But how? If there was any plan regarding his future there, he could not guess what it was. It seemed to him that in the four months he had been at work, he had been moved about in the most haphazard fashion, without having been left anywhere long enough to feel that he was learning or ac- complishing anything. It grieved him. The Judge had said that if he knew where he wanted to go, he would arrive faster. Well, he had known. But if all this shifting about was training for personnel work, it would have to be made plain to him!

He had questioned his immediate superior several times without sat- isfaction. He determined finally to see Lester Brandt himself. And it occurred to him that it would be to his advantage to face Lester in his home. In the plant, in his president's room, he was vested with more authority and prestige than his unimportant figure could command elsewhere. Besides, go- ing to the house would give Gerry a chance to see Alicia again—her last words to him nagged at his mind. Was she really going west? He did not like the thought, for Kingsridge without Alicia would be Kingsridge without a single un- derstanding. But perhaps that hadn't meant that. Perhaps that had only been a line tossed out to bait him. This was what he wanted to know.

He was forestalled in his plan, however, by Lester: himself who sent for him to come to his office one day. Gerry arrived, hot, streaked with grease, and in his shirt sleeves, having hurried from the taking of inventory down in the storeroom. And the sight of Lester in an immaculate gray linen suit, seated before a large gleam- ing mahogany desk, brought him to a sharp realization of the injustice of the world. Man to man, he was as good as this mean-mouthed, meagerly-built, potato-patting creature before him. Yet he was a small cog here, while Lester was the big wheel. The thought did not give him the composure he needed or the respect he knew he should show. Sweating, with his hands balled into fists and his broad shoulders heaving from his haste, he said curtly, "You sent for me?"

Lester nodded silently. He did not invite Gerry to be seated or even indicate by a gesture the empty chair that stood on the other side of his desk. He simply flicked his pale, cold, flat eyes over Gerry and then dropped his gaze to his fingernails which he exam- ined with minute care from then on nearly all the time he was waiting.

"I sent for you because I un- derstand you are not satisfied here."

"I never said that!"

"It was reliably reported to me that you don't like your work."

Gerry said stiffly, "May I tell you my side of the story?"

"Certainly."

Gerry drew a breath and forced his voice to an even quality through a hot, scornful im- patience was rocketing up in him.

"I came here, as you know, through the good offices of Judge King. I was given to understand by him that there was a future here for me, and that if I knew where I was heading..."

Lester interrupted.

"Judge King quite overstepped himself, I would say. He definitely overstepped his mark. All he could do, was get you in here. What your future is now that you are here is, he lifted his gaze for a short moment and Gerry saw in it a queer malevolent gleam, "entire- ly up to me." He paused. Gerry waited.

"And I must say," Lester went on, his tone silky and suave, "that it does not help your progress in the least to have it said that be- fore you have been here six months, before you are in line for any consideration whatsoever, you are making complaints about the kind of work you are given to do."

A memory flashed to Gerry. Of himself and Alicia having lunch together long ago in New York. Of his asking if he might come see her again and of her replying quickly, "No. Lester doesn't like you."

It had not occurred to him, then the reason why. But now, suddenly, he knew. Now, by Les- ter's voice, by his look, by every- thing in his manner, Gerry was made disconcertingly aware that Lester not only disliked him but felt an active hatred toward him. Because of Alicia's interest in him? Of course. Somehow he had divined that. Perhaps when they had danced together at the en- gagement party and had disap- peared from sight into the con- servatory. No. It must have been sooner than that. It must date back to the first time he had dined at Lester's house. Anyway, this was probably why Alicia had said that she was "frightened" for them both. Under the pressure of the moment he had not asked her why she felt so. But now he had the answer. All this being true, there was only one direction in which he, Gerry, would ever make progress here—and that was to- ward an exit.

He stood silent and stunned as he felt his castle falling about his ears. But he was not one to admit defeat without a fight. There had been nothing between him and Alicia! Lester couldn't hang any- thing on him. Nobody could.

He said, "Just one or two ques- tions, Mr. Brandt. Has it ever been made known to you that I would like to be in the personnel department? If it has, will you be so kind as to tell me how the counting of bolts and screws and nuts and nails will help get me there?"

"And now you are overstep- ping," Lester said icily.

Gerry's eyes flashed. "Let's be frank. Are you firing me?"

"No. I'm not firing me!"

"No, I'm not firing you. I'm keeping you here in my plant," he looked up again for just a moment and Gerry saw a malicious light of pleasure in his eyes, "for reasons of my own."

Gerry turned abruptly and strode from the office. Behind him Les- ter sat looking at his nails with a small satisfied smile.

All the way home that night to his room at the Inn, Gerry thought hard. His first reaction, that the Judge had put him in this spot deliberately, he dismissed at once. Gerry felt little love for Steven King but he had to respect him, and he knew that he was upright in his dealings and that his effort to give aid had been honest. Be- sides, Steven knew nothing of Les- ter's animosity toward Gerry, since he believed that Alicia was interested in Frank.

And then Gerry began to won- der what possible persuasion or pressure the Judge could have brought to bear on Lester to make him employ him at all when Les- ter hated him so? It seemed queer and the more he thought about it, the queerer it seemed.

Why hadn't he refused the Judge's request? Because he didn't want to admit to anyone that Alicia no longer cared for him? His was a small, vain soul. Actually, for all his wealth, he had little. Alicia was his greatest treasure. Alicia was liked where he was not. Alicia had beauty, too, however careless she was about it. Alicia was his prop in a world that, except for his money, gave him scant attention.

That might have been why. Yet, without bringing Alicia into the picture at all, he could easily have said, as so many other men had said, that there was no opening at present. Why hadn't he? Why?

Over and over he asked himself that question until he believed he had the answer. The Judge knew something about Lester Brandt. If Gerry could find out what that was, then he would have some- thing on him. A lever by which to elevate himself in Lester's company despite his enmity!

He began dressing for dinner at the Kings that night with his ex- citement rising to a high pitch within him. He would see the Judge, who was no longer un- friendly, who was now merely pas- sively observant. The Judge stood for fair play. He would not care for Gerry's case as Gerry planned to present it. He might or he might not offer to speak again on Gerry's behalf. But if he did, Gerry would say that he preferred to speak for himself. He would ask the Judge straight out what he knew about Lester Brandt. In- deed, he would demand the in- formation. Hadn't he the cudgel, in Frank's and Alicia's meeting, which made it possible for him to do just that?

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Why should the captain of the Missouri be rebuked. The ship of state has floundered into every narrow channel in the Chi- na Sea.

In fact, it's difficult to tell at times whether it's being run from the bridge or the ward room.

Anyway the captain now knows how the commuter felt who rushed on the train without his pants. He was supposed to be there but not so conspicuous.

But most people were surprised to read that the Missouri is our only active battleship. Some said "only one?" Others said, "we still have one?"

It was Germany that started the trend toward "pocket battle- ships" but it took the USA to de- velop the air pocket for battle- ships.

Some of our air fellows said "See, you can't depend on a bat- tleship!" Then they waited for a fog to lift so they could fly.

My New York
by MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—For a city that is some centuries removed from the menace of the Indian, this front of civilization is curiously crowded these days with cowboys.

Once a year we have a month full of rodeo. There are certain movie houses that specialize in Wild West films. The radio networks between 5 and 7 daily are rampant with the clatter of hooves. Whiskey tenors wail on records for the little dogies to get along, and, naturally, every small boy patrolling Broadway in the late after- noon with his mother is clad in chaps and sombrero.

You would think the town is one vast prairie, and it is not unlikely that one or more paying customers at the Colony recently have called it the chuck wagon, perish forbid.

Much of the motley crew that furnishes us with this atmosphere is so phony as to border on the grotesque, but today I lunched at the Lambs club, surrounded by actors still rubbing their eyes from the noontime sun, with a New York cowboy who came as close to the real thing as it is possible to unearth here on the Times Square mess.

He was a big rawboned man named Bob Dixon and he was wear- ing a blue suit and a gray shirt as he sat across the table and ex- plained the intricacies of being a television cowpoke. For Dixon, who has been one of Manhattan's top radio announcers for years, is building himself a career as the character, Sheriff Bob, in a local television show known as the Chuck Wagon.

The blue suit and gray shirt were in keeping with his outlook on the range-riding life. It is entirely likely that most cowhands when they leave the wide open spaces for the city do not come into town in white breeches and pearl-handled six-guns, but dress roughly after the fashion of town folk.

The 6-foot 4-inch Dixon lives up in New Canaan, Conn., a train ride of an hour or so from New York, and when he is up there he rides, camps, polishes saddles and generally roughs it. But when he comes to the Lambs club for luncheon, he does as the Romans do. It is singularly refreshing.

"I GUESS OUR TV SHOW IS AIMED MOSTLY AT KIDS," Dixon explained, "but we don't plan it that way—and I think it's better for that, because you can't talk down to kids anyway. They can spot a phony a mile away. Especially phony cowboys."

"When they're five or six, they think the razzle-dazzle ones who ride the range with a guitar are wonderful, but after a while they get to know pretty surely whether a guy knows what he's talking about when he begins to show them how to ride, rope or make up a bedroll."

Those are the things that Dixon does on Chuck Wagon, and he has the background for them. He was born and raised in Connecti- cut, but since the age of 12 he has been summering on ranches, both in the east and west, and he's read everything on the outdoor life on which he could lay his hands.

He has the idea that every man at heart—"on Park avenue or anywhere else"—is a frustrated cowboy, and it could be that he's right. Around 40 per cent of his rapidly expanding volume of fan mail comes from adults, who are curious about how to tie a knot, read a cattle brand or cinch a saddle.

HOWEVER, EVEN IN HIS BLUE SUIT AND GRAY SHIRT, Dixon isn't quite the city-type man, and when you ask him for his candid opinion of New York, he has to grin a little shamefacedly and shake his head.

"Listen," he told me, "I'm not knocking the city, but it's for a certain kind of man. I'm a country man. My ambition is to get myself a nice hunk of farmland and breed horses, for racing or trotting and pacing."

"But I make my living here and I have a lot of friends and it's fine. What I will say is that I guess I don't really start living until I get on that train in Grand Central and get back to Connecticut and maybe take one of my horses for a long canter."

Every morning before he commutes to the city, Bob mounts his palomino and rides for an hour or so, and whenever he can get away for more than a day, all the Dixons—wife and two young teenaged kids—go off on camping trips.

He is one of our few authentic cowboys, but he doesn't jam it down your throat. There was just one giveaway when I met him. Instead of ordinary shoes, he was wearing low-cut boots, of the type known as Wellingtons.

"My instep is so high," he said, "that shoestrings cut my feet." But he lied in his teeth. Like he said, there isn't a man born who isn't a frustrated cowboy.

TO BALANCE OR NOT
THERE seems to be little question that the issue of the balanced budget is to be one of the liveliest ones of the present session of Congress. Almost everyone in Washington, it appears, has something to say about it. A House-Senate banking subcommittee, which has been studying government fiscal, monetary and credit policies, put into its report a statement of opposition to the idea that government income and spending should be balanced every year. It did add that Congress should pursue an "unrelenting" quest for economy.
The subcommittee is right in saying that the budget cannot be balanced every year, come what may. The government can be expected to have to borrow once in a while, just as an individual has to do. But we seem now to have gone to the opposite extreme, and to be operating on the idea that government spending and income do not have to be brought into balance in any year. That would be a wonderful way to run the family budget, but unfortunately it won't work out there. It won't work out in government, either.
We have made it too easy for the government to borrow money. We have permitted Congress to get the borrowing habit, and some day we shall pay through the nose for our profligate national living now. The longer it goes on, the more dearly we shall have to pay when the day of reckoning can no longer be put off.

PRICES BY AGREEMENT
ONE reason why anti-trust enthusiasts look with suspicion on all price agreements among sellers is to be found in a recent case in Philadelphia. Five large department stores were brought to court under the Sherman Act because of an agreement which did not fix a price for any item but only provided that certain price endings in odd cents would not be used. Readily admitting the agreement, the stores said the intent was not to fix or raise prices but only to simplify pricing, and light sentences meted out by the presiding judge indicated that he was persuaded that the intent was, indeed, honest.
Government prosecutors, however, were able to claim, and without rebuttal, that in every instance of a price affected by this agreement the price was increased, and that in no case was there a price reduction under its terms. Thus, no matter how innocent the purposes of the agreement, the result was an increase in the cost of goods to the customers of the stores.
An increase in consumer cost is likely to be the effect of any agreement among private concerns or any action of government which tends to restrict or limit either competition or production.

George E. Sokolsky's
These Days
It may be possible for Dr. Hermann Sander to argue, or even to establish in a court of law, that when he gave Mrs. Abbie Borroto a hypodermic injection of air, he knew that she would soon die; that he saved her a few hours of agony; that his purposes were compassionate. Certainly the man is essentially honest and scrupulous, for he noted that he had given his patient a dose of "10 cc. of air," a fatal dose when injected into an artery.

Thus, Dr. Sander made euthanasia, or "mercy killing," a matter for judicial procedure. Should he be convicted, there is a possibility that the case will go up to the Supreme Court of the United States for final determination.

But what will it be that the courts may ultimately decide? It can only be whether any man is entitled to private judgment in ending the life of another, even for compassionate reasons.

Certainly, this was a difficult decision to make for a man of the high character, as all his neighbors attest, of Dr. Sander. He wearies of Mrs. Borroto's suffering and he eased her out. Whether that is a more general practise than we know, no one can say. We are in the hands of our physicians whose object is to heal and cure, not to act as the angel of death.

Who is to say that a cure will never be found for cancer? Actually many sufferers of cancer are now cured. When my father was my present age, diabetes was a dreaded illness. Today, one who has this disability can with care and obedience to simple rules, live a useful life to ripe old age.

For instance, Edda Ciano announces, apparently with pride, that she was born before her father, Benito Mussolini, married her mother.

Aly Khan, in a moment of garrulous mendacity, announces earlier than anyone could scientifically know that his wife would give birth to a premature baby. Then there is all the commotion about Ingrid Bergman being pregnant while she is married to one man with whom she is not living and is associating with another man to whom she is not married.

All this is supposed to be romantic but it violates our basic morals which come to us from the Ten Commandments and upon which stands the whole of our civilization. It is unfortunate enough that we are frail and err and misbehave; it is unfortunate that we cannot and do not live up to our principles and ideals.

The right of free choice is not contested when a society defends itself against the evils which may result from such exercise of private judgment as can destroy society itself.

KINGSRIDGE

by Alice Ross Colver

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE
AND IT was strange and strain in the plant, too. For, rightly or wrongly, Gerry had come to the conclusion that a promotion there would give Judge King proof of what he wanted regarding him. As fast as Gerry was moved up, Steven's attitude toward him would thaw. The trick, then, was to force such a promotion as soon as possible.
But now? If there was any plan regarding his future there, he could not guess what it was. It seemed to him that in the four months he had been at work, he had been moved about in the most haphazard fashion, without having been left anywhere long enough to feel that he was learning or accomplishing anything. It gripped him. The Judge had said that if he knew where he wanted to go he would arrive faster. Well, he had known. But at all this shifting about was training for personnel work, it would have to be made plain to him!
He had questioned his immediate superior several times without satisfaction. He determined finally to see Lester Brandt himself. And it occurred to him that it would be to his advantage to face Lester at his home. In the plant, in his president's room, he was treated with a certain respect and prestige, but his unimportant figure could command elsewhere. Besides, going to the house would give Gerry a chance to see Alicia again—her last words in his nagged at his mind. Was she really going west? He did not like the thought, for Kingsridge without Alicia would be a Kingsridge without a single understanding soul. But perhaps she hadn't meant that. Perhaps that had only been a line tossed out to bait him. This was what he wanted to know.
He was forestalled in his plan, however, by Lester: himself who sent for him to come to his office one day. Gerry arrived, hot and streaked with grease, and in his shirt sleeves, having hurried from the taking of inventory down in the storeroom. And the sight of Lester in an immaculate gray linen suit, seated before a large, quietly revolving fan at his leather-topped mahogany desk, brought him to a sharp realization of the injustice of the world. Man to man, he was as good as this mean-mouthed, meagerly-built, potato-pating creature before him. Yet he was a small cog here, while Lester was the big wheel. The thought did not give him the composure he needed or the respect he knew he should show. Sweating, with his hands balled into fists and his broad shoulders heaving from his haste, he said curtly,
"You sent for me?"
Lester nodded silently. He did not invite Gerry to be seated or even indicate by a gesture the empty chair that stood on the other side of his desk. He simply flicked his pale, cold, flat eyes over Gerry and then dropped his gaze to his fingernails which he examined with minute care from then on nearly all the time he was waiting.
"I sent for you because I understand you are not satisfied here."
"I never said that!"
"It was reliably reported to me that you don't like your work."
Gerry said stiffly, "May I tell you my side of the story?"
"Certainly."
Gerry drew a breath and forced his voice to an even quality through a hot, scornful impatience was rocketing up in him. "I came here, as you know, through the good offices of Judge King. I was given to understand by him that there was a future here for me, and that if I knew where I was heading..."
Lester interrupted.
"Judge King quite overstepped himself, I would say. He definitely overstepped his mark. All he could do was get you in here. What your future is now that you are here is, he lifted his gaze for a short moment and Gerry saw in it a queer malevolent gleam, "entirely up to me." He paused. Gerry waited.
"And I must say," Lester went on, his tone silky and suave, "that it does not help your progress in the least to have it said that before you have been here six months, before you are in line for any consideration whatsoever, you are making complaints about the kind of work you are given to do."
A memory flashed to Gerry. Of himself and Alicia having lunch together long ago in New York. Of his asking if he might come see her again and of her replying quickly, "No. Lester doesn't like you." It had not occurred to him, then the reason why. But now, suddenly, he knew. Now, by Lester's voice, by his look, by everything in his manner, Gerry was made disconcertingly aware that Lester not only disliked him but felt an active hatred toward him. Because of Alicia's interest in him? Of course. Somehow he had divined that. Perhaps when they had danced together at the engagement party and had disappeared from sight into the conservatory. No. It must have been sooner than that. It must date back to the first time he had dined at Lester's house. Anyway, this was probably why Alicia had said that she was "frightened" for them both. Under the pressure of the moment he had not asked her why she felt so. But now he had the answer. All this being true, there was only one direction in which he, Gerry, would ever make progress here—and that was toward an exit.
He stood sick and stunned as he felt his castle falling about his ears. But he was not one to admit defeat without a fight. There had been nothing between him and Alicia! Lester couldn't hang anything on him. Nobody could.
He said, "Just one or two questions, Mr. Brandt. Has it ever been made known to you that I would like to be in the personnel department? If it has, will you be so kind as to tell me how the counting of bolts and screws and nuts and nails will help get me there?"
"And now you are overstepping," Lester said icily.
Gerry's eyes flashed. "Let's be frank. Are you firing me?"
"No, I'm not firing you. I'm keeping you here in my plant," he looked up again for just a moment and Gerry saw a malicious light of pleasure in his eyes, "for reasons of my own."
Gerry turned abruptly and strode from the office. Behind him Lester sat looking at his nails with a small satisfied smile.
All the way home that night to his room at the Inn, Gerry thought hard. His first reaction, that the Judge had put him in this spot deliberately, he dismissed at once. Gerry felt little love for Steven King but he had to respect him, and he knew that he was upright in his dealings and that his effort to give aid had been honest. Besides, Steven knew nothing of Lester's animosity toward Gerry, since he believed that Alicia was interested in Frank.
And then Gerry began to wonder what possible persuasion or pressure the Judge could have brought to bear on Lester to make him employ him at all when Lester hated him so? It seemed queer and the more he thought about it, the queerer it seemed.
Why hadn't he refused the Judge's request? Because he didn't want to admit to anyone that Alicia no longer cared for him? His was a small, vain soul. Actually, for all his wealth, he had little. Alicia was his greatest treasure. Alicia was liked where he was not. Alicia had beauty, too, however careless she was about it. Alicia was his prop in a world that, except for his money, gave him scant attention.
That might have been why. Yet, without bringing Alicia into the picture at all, he could easily have said, as so many other men had said, that there was no opening at present. Why hadn't he? Why? Over and over he asked himself that question until he believed he had the answer. The Judge knew something about Lester Brandt. If Gerry could find out what that was, then he would have something on him. A lever by which to elevate himself in Lester's company despite his enmity!
He began dressing for dinner at the Kings that night with his excitement rising to a high pitch within him. He would see the Judge, who was no longer unfriendly, who was now merely passively observant. The Judge stood for fair play. He would not care for Gerry's case as Gerry planned to present it. He might or he might not offer to speak again on Gerry's behalf. But if he did, Gerry would say that he preferred to speak for himself. He would ask the Judge straight out what he knew about Lester Brandt. Indeed, he would demand the information. Hadn't he the cudgel, in Frank's and Alicia's meeting, which made it possible for him to do just that?

ONE MAN'S OPINION
Why should the captain of the Missouri be rebuked. The ship of state has floundered into every narrow channel in the China Sea.
In fact, it's difficult to tell at times whether it's being run from the bridge or the ward room.
Anyway the captain now knows how the commuter felt who rushed on the train without his pants. He was supposed to be there but not so conspicuous.
But most people were surprised to read that the Missouri is our only active battleship. Some said "only one?" Others said, "we still have one?"
It was Germany that started the trend toward "pocket battleships" but it took the USA to develop the air pocket for battleships.
Some of our air fellows said "See, you can't depend on a battleship!" Then they waited for a fog to lift so they could fly.

My New York
by MEL HEIMER
NEW YORK—For a city that is some centuries removed from the menace of the Indian, this font of civilization is curiously crowded these days with cowboys.
Once a year we have a month full of rodeo. There are certain movie houses that specialize in Wild West films. The radio networks between 5 and 7 daily are rampant with the clatter of hooves. Whisky tenors wail on records for the little dogies to get along, and, naturally, every small boy patrolling Broadway in the late afternoon with his mother is clad in chaps and sombrero.
You would think the town is one vast prairie, and it is not unlikely that one or more paying customers at the Colony recently have called it the chuck wagon, perchance.
Much of the motley crew that furnishes us with this atmosphere is so phony as to border on the grotesque, but today I lunched at the Lambs club, surrounded by actors still rubbing their eyes from the noontime sun, with a New York cowboy who came as close to the real thing as it is possible to unearth here on the Times Square mess.
He was a big rawboned man named Bob Dixon and he was wearing a blue suit and a gray shirt as he sat across the table and explained the intricacies of being a television cowpoke. For Dixon, who has been one of Manhattan's top radio announcers for years, is building himself a career as the character, Sheriff Bob, in a local television show known as the Chuck Wagon.

Pollard Tells Of Presidents

Rotary Anns were guests of their Rotarian husbands Thursday evening at a turkey dinner held in parish house of St. Philip's Episcopal church.

A talk by Dr. James E. Pollard, director of Ohio State university's school of journalism, entertainment by a magician, Ed Green of Columbus, music, individual corsages, and a turkey dinner by candle light were some of the evening highlights provided for the pleasure of the Rotary Anns.

Karl Herrmann, with Mrs. Herrmann as accompanist, conducted the group singing which put guests in proper frame of mind for the evening.

Candle-lighted tables were decorated with individual corsages grouped to form centerpieces by Robert Brehmer Jr. Fritz Sieverts was in charge of recorded dinner music.

Dr. Pollard, spoke on "The Hardest Job in the World"—President of the United States. He reviewed the lives of the Presidents, elaborating on characteristics of each. Dr. Pollard's book, "The President and the Press" earned for him the 1947 Distinguished Service Award presented by Sigma Delta Chi professional journalism fraternity.

Preceding Dr. Pollard's address, the Columbus magician entertained and mystified his audience with his illusions. He was assisted in some of his acts by Larry Best, Leslie May, Ed Grigg and Orson Patrick.

Arthur McCoard, president of Rotary, gave the welcoming address to Rotary Anns before introducing Dr. G. D. Phillips who was chairman in charge of the program. Reservation arrangements were made under direction of Lawrence Goeller Jr.

Mt. Pleasant Grange will meet in its hall at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday.

Mrs. W. Emerson Downing will entertain Papyrus Club in her home on East Main street at 8 p. m. Tuesday.

Mrs. James Reichelderfer will have as her subject "Brown America" when she addresses Monday Club in Memorial Hall at 8 p. m.

Elinor Williams'
Teen Tips

Why is it that some boys always accept invitations but never come up with one of their own? It's the worst of bad manners and makes girls wonder what goes on under the crew cut—here's a letter from one of them:

"When a girl asked a boy to act as her escort for a prom, is he expected to repay this evening in any way?" she asks. "I would like to ask this boy again, as I think he is very nice. But would it be proper under the circumstances as it now stands?"

Ans.—A boy shouldn't accept an invitation from a girl unless he likes her enough to ask her for a date in return afterward—not necessarily a dance, but at least a movie, a school game, a picnic, etc.

It's good manners to entertain people who have entertained you, not only while in school but all through life. Some boys evidently don't know it. You could give him a second invitation, if you like, but not again after that until he comes up with a date suggestion of his own.

"How do you tactfully refuse goodnight kisses?" asks another girl. "If I kiss boys, they seem to think I want to 'go steady' with them and I don't want 'go steady' yet."

Ans.—Some girls leave the porch light on to help discourage goodnight kisses. Others say, "When we know each other better—" or "Not THIS time—" because this is not too final or definite a refusal in case they decide later that they'd like to "go steady" after all.

For tips on games for party fun, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Elinor Williams in care of The Herald.

tees will be announced when Pickaway County Association of Women's Clubs meets at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Presbyterian church.

State Grange
Master Is Guest Of Meet Here

State Master Joseph Fichter and Mrs. Fichter were guests of Scioto Valley Grange Tuesday night when 158 members and friends attended a pot-luck supper and meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Turney Glick also were guests.

Fichter had been unable to attend the re-dedication ceremonies last year held by Scioto Valley Grange for their newly remodeled hall. He gave a short talk commending the Grange on the building and their program of community betterment.

Glick presented the Grange with an Award of Merit for 1949.

Mrs. Fichter and Mrs. Glick were introduced. Mrs. Fichter is in charge of state Juvenile Grange work. Mrs. Glick heads the county Juvenile Grange activities.

Newly-elected lecturer, Mrs. C. A. Haslep, presented the program of entertainment. "Biography of Benjamin Franklin," a skit, was given by Eddie Leath-wood, Carolyn Forshey, Ned and Ted Dennis, Forest Doersam and Donald Krieger.

Music was supplied by a quintet composed of Katherine and Dorothy Hafey, Betty Hutchinson, Patty Forshey and Ruth McCarty. Patty Duval was accompanist; and a quartet whose members were Louise Fisher, Harold Fisher, Ralph Fisher and Leona Berger who sang "Garden of Prayer" accompanied by Mrs. Paul Teegardin. Solos were sung by Jack Clellan accompanied by Martha Duval. The program closed with group singing.

Rotary Anns Entertained With Magic, Turkey Feed And Professor's Talk

Pollard Tells Of Presidents

Rotary Anns were guests of their Rotarian husbands Thursday evening at a turkey dinner held in parish house of St. Philip's Episcopal church.

A talk by Dr. James E. Pollard, director of Ohio State university's school of journalism, entertainment by a magician, Ed Green of Columbus, music, individual corsages, and a turkey dinner by candle light were some of the evening highlights provided for the pleasure of the Rotary Anns.

Karl Herrmann, with Mrs. Herrmann as accompanist, conducted the group singing which put guests in proper frame of mind for the evening.

Candle-lighted tables were decorated with individual corsages grouped to form centerpieces by Robert Brehmer Jr. Fritz Sieverts was in charge of recorded dinner music.

Dr. Pollard, spoke on "The Hardest Job in the World"—President of the United States. He reviewed the lives of the Presidents, elaborating on characteristics of each. Dr. Pollard's book, "The President and the Press" earned for him the 1947 Distinguished Service Award presented by Sigma Delta Chi professional journalism fraternity.

Preceding Dr. Pollard's address, the Columbus magician entertained and mystified his audience with his illusions. He was assisted in some of his acts by Larry Best, Leslie May, Ed Grigg and Orson Patrick.

Arthur McCoard, president of Rotary, gave the welcoming address to Rotary Anns before introducing Dr. G. D. Phillips who was chairman in charge of the program. Reservation arrangements were made under direction of Lawrence Goeller Jr.

Teen Tips

Why is it that some boys always accept invitations but never come up with one of their own? It's the worst of bad manners and makes girls wonder what goes on under the crew cut—here's a letter from one of them:

"When a girl asked a boy to act as her escort for a prom, he expected to repay this evening in any way?" she asks. "I would like to ask this boy again, as I think he is very nice. But would it be proper under the circumstances as it now stands?"

Ans.—A boy shouldn't accept an invitation from a girl unless he likes her enough to ask her for a date in return afterward—not necessarily a dance, but at least a movie, a school game, a picnic, etc.

It's good manners to entertain people who have entertained you, not only while in school but all through life. Some boys evidently don't know it. You could give him a second invitation, if you like, but not again after that until he comes up with a date suggestion of his own.

"How do you tactfully refuse goodnight kisses?" asks another girl. "If I kiss boys, they seem to think I want to 'go steady' with them and I don't want to 'go steady' yet."

Ans.—Some girls leave the porch light on to help discourage goodnight kisses. Others say, "When we know each other better—" or "Not THIS time—" because this is not too final or definite a refusal in case they decide later that they'd like to "go steady" after all.

For tips on games for party fun, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Elinor Williams in care of The Herald.

tees will be announced when Pickaway County Association of Women's Clubs meets at 8 p. m. Tuesday in Presbyterian church.

State Grange Master Is Guest Of Meet Here

State Master Joseph Fichter and Mrs. Fichter were guests of Scioto Valley Grange Tuesday night when 158 members and friends attended a pot-luck supper and meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Turney Glick also were guests.

Fichter had been unable to attend the re-dedication ceremonies last year held by Scioto Valley Grange for their newly remodeled hall. He gave a short talk commending the Grange on the building and their program of community betterment.

Glick presented the Grange with an Award of Merit for 1949.

Mrs. Fichter and Mrs. Glick were introduced. Mrs. Fichter is in charge of state Juvenile Grange work. Mrs. Glick heads the county Juvenile Grange activities.

Newly-elected lecturer, Mrs. C. A. Haslep, presented the program of entertainment. "Biography of Benjamin Franklin," a skit, was given by Eddie Leatherwood, Carolyn Forshey, Ned and Ted Dennis, Forest Doersam and Donald Krieger.

Music was supplied by a quintet composed of Katherine and Dorothy Hafey, Betty Hutchinson, Patty Forshey and Ruth McCarty. Patty Duval was accompanist; and a quartet whose members were Louise Fisher, Harold Fisher, Ralph Fisher and Leona Berger who sang "Garden of Prayer" accompanied by Mrs. Paul Teegardin. Solos were sung by Jack Clellan accompanied by Martha Duval. The program closed with group singing.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our father, Amos E. Stout, who passed away one year ago today.

No better father could be found. No matter where one looks around. He sleeps so sweetly 'neath the ground.

Our Father.

God called him from earth to sky. Some day I know we'll all must die. But we shall meet again by and bye.

SCO League To Make 3 Law Changes

27-Year-Old Pact To Be Modified

A 27-year-old constitution for the South Central Ohio League was revised and brought up to date recently during a meeting of member school principals in Washington, C. H.

The constitution, reportedly unaltered since 1923, suffered three major changes in the suggested revision by the board of control, which at present consists of Circleville's J. Wray Henry, Walter Shannon of Hillsboro, Donald Leahy of Wilmington, C. E. Boober of Greenfield and A. E. Wohlers of Washington, C. H.

Circleville officials were vague about what happened at the parley, but Wohlers said the proposed amendments are:

1. In case of disagreement with any article of the constitution by any member schools, it must be submitted to the board of control for decision.
2. The arbitration change was precipitated by the conflict between Washington and Hillsboro two years ago, when the two schools severed athletic relations with each other. The two member schools now apparently have resumed relations and have scheduled games with each other next fall.
3. That the regular all-league meetings will be set in November and March in the constitution instead of the September and March dates now carried.

It has been the practice of the league to meet every November and March for the last several years, meaning that the change will be only a revision to bring the constitution up to date.

Wohlers said the revisions suggested by the member school principals will have to be approved by a two-thirds vote at a general meeting of the league. The changes probably will be voted upon during the March session.

Page To Parley With Yankees

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 — Joe Page parleys with Yankee officials today. The world champion's ace relief pitcher reportedly seeks a $15,000 pay boost for 1950.

The Yankee left-hander, whose spectacular relief pitching was a tremendous factor in the team's successful last season, was believed to be looking for a contract calling for $35,000.

The New York chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association has picked Page for its first annual Babe Ruth Memorial Plaque for being the "most valuable player in the World Series."

Pickaway Coasts To 55-39 Win Over Saltcreek

Pickaway Pirate basketballers easily defeated invading Saltcreek Warriors Thursday by a wide 55-39 margin.

Although the Saltcreekers finally were outclassed in the last half of play, they started with a good scrap which found them trailing by only one-point margins through the first half. Pickaway widened the gap in the third period to lead by a margin of 16 points.

Frank Rhoads paced the winning Pickaway team in the contest with a total of 14 points. Every Pickaway basketballer who dressed played in the match.

Saltcreek was shutout all around when Pickaway reservists posted a 36-18 win over Saltcreek's subs in the preliminary match.

2 Cage Tilts Scheduled For Moose League

Only two contests are carded for Sunday in the Moose independent basketball loop. Amanda, undefeated leader of the league, will tackle Fox in the first match at about 1 p. m., followed by a contest between Milkmen and Walnut.

Circleville Oilers are second to the powerful Amanda aggregation in standings as the league moves into its seventh week of play, while the host Moose cagers trail at third place.

The Milkmen-Walnut contest will determine fourth place in league standings Sunday. Both teams now are tied for the spot with two wins each in four starts to date.

Frank Wilkins, league manager, said two makeup games probably will be played next Friday night. Contests for the makeup engagement are Yellowbud vs. Fox and Circleville Oilers vs. Milkmen.

Complete standings of the loop at present follow:

Move Afoot To Match Whiz Kids And Famous Kentucky Cage Quint

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 — A basketball game between the two most acclaimed college teams in more than a decade—Kentucky's fabulous five and Illinois' Whiz Kids—is a spectator's dream that may become a reality.

A promoter is trying to get the members of the two aggregations together for a contest in Chicago and possibly a second one in Louisville.

Tentative plans call for the game or games to be played after the close of the National Basketball Association schedule in March.

Four of the ex-Kentuckians are now the playing owners of the professional Indianapolis Olympians. They are Alex Groza, Ralph Beard, Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones and Cliff Barker.

Kenny Rollins was the fifth man with the former wizards of college basketball and now does his performing with the Chicago Stags.

The Whiz Kids are more scattered. Andy Phillip is captain of the Chicago entry in the National Basketball Association.

JACK SMILEY is playing coach of the Waterloo Hawks and Ken Menke is a forward on the same team.

Husky Gene Vance performs with the Tri-City Blackhawks. Art Mathisen is the only Whiz other players for the 1950 season.

President Warren Giles said that, besides Stallcup, infielder Sammy Meeks, Hobart Landrith, a 19-year-old rookie catcher, and outfielders Lloyd Marri-man, Bob Usher and Walt Post had returned their signed pacts.

The six raised to 11 the number of Redlegs already in the fold for the coming season.

Kid not participating in professional basketball. He is currently coaching at an Illinois high school but plays amateur basketball now and then.

The game would undoubtedly be a tremendous financial success in either Chicago or Louisville.

Kentucky's graduates probably would rank as the favorite in such a contest for at least two reasons. Four of them are playing as a unit at this time. They also are a few years younger than the Illinois basketball masters.

Almost seven years have gone by since the Whiz Kids captured the Big Ten championship with 12 consecutive victories. Their average age is over 27. The average for the Kentuckians is 24.

It also would be hard to deny the Kentuckians an advantage at center. Groza is second only to George Mikan in professional basketball's individual scoring honors. Mathisen has not been playing for pay and probably is a bit rusty.

Ike Williams To Go Again

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 — Lightweight Boxing Champion Ike Williams clashes with 22-year-old Johnny Bratton in Chicago Stadium tonight in a 10-round non-title bout.

The oddsmakers rate Williams a 9 to 7 favorite over the Golden Glove graduate, but most members of the Chicago Boxing Writers Association point to Bratton as the probable winner.

This is the third match between the pair. Williams won the two previous fights in New Orleans and Philadelphia by close decisions.

$66,416 Operating Revenue Shown By Water Department

City Council Gets Report For 1949

Leist Outlines Work Of Year

Gross operating revenues in Circleville water department for 1949 were $66,416.59, according to an annual report submitted to city council.

The report shows total operating revenue deductions as $68,018.19, making an apparent loss of $1,601.60 in net operating income for the department.

"At first glance it appears the division of water lost money in 1949," Manager Ervin Leist said. "But if the expenditures are analyzed, the reverse is found to be true."

"Using round numbers, the $66,000 was the gross revenue of which $23,500 was transferred to the water works sinking fund. This sum was, in effect, profit, earmarked for debt retirement. It is applicable to the $460,000 bonded debt."

"Water main extension cost $13,000. This was a capital investment and adds to the present value of the water works. An additional $6,000 was spent for further capital improvements. "To be a successful enterprise certain monies must be plowed back to gain new business."

"IN THE CASE of our own water system it is common knowledge that many extensions have been needed for years. Some of these have been accomplished in the past three and one half years."

"As a matter of fact, over two miles of mains have been installed at a total cost of some $23,400. All of which came from revenue."

Under "detail of operating expenses" the report lists total operating expense as $22,533.98. Office expenses were $3,947.04, supply and distribution, $7,591.89; pumping, $10,995.05.

"In the $22,500 cost of operation," explained Leist, "is a maintenance item of $1,365 for painting the standpipe. This is an item of recurrence at five-year intervals, or a cost of $273 per year chargeable to operation."

"An item of expenditure which should have been charged to 1948 operation, but for which a bill was not received until late 1949, was for $321.16 for coal at the pumping station.

"This amount plus the coal for 1949 shows a sizeable sum for coal usage which is not the actual 1949 consumption, but rather a two-year period."

The report lists $2,257.20 for electricity at the pumping station, and $699.79 for coal and gasoline, a total of $2,956.99.

"OUR STOCK of materials inventory is fairly constant at $2,000," Leist said. "All of which is paid for and can be charged to capital investment in addition to other capital expenditures."

"The purchase of the well-point system as a temporary means of supplementing the supply was likewise a capital investment and as such enabled us to supply the water needs during 1949."

His report lists capital expenses at $19,088.41. Break down is as follows:

Service connections, $1,482; water main extensions, $13,321.37; furniture and fixtures, $128.80; new equipment, $2,394.47; new meters, $1,485.90; and miscellaneous, $275.87.

Under "transfer to sinking fund and expenditures" the report shows total receipts and balance as $30,941.25, of which $7,441.25 was the balance as of Jan. 1, and $23,500 was transferred from operating revenue.

Total expenditures were given as $21,757.50, of which $13,000 was for bond retirement and $8,757.50 for interest on bonds. Balance in the sinking fund on Dec. 31, 1949 was $9,183.75.

Under "water works improvement fund" the report lists a total balance of $3,211.36.

Water main extensions on Atwater, Seyfert and Wilson avenues cost $7,901.33, on Hayward street, $1,377.07 and on Watt street, $4,042.97.

Total balance in all funds was given as $20,710.34.

IN 1949 THE total number of consumer accounts as of Dec. 31 was 2,526. There were 52 new services installed, 33 services renewed, 30 service lines repaired, 83 consumers added, 31 new meters set and two services discontinued.

The report revealed that 95 new meters were purchased, and 30 were returned to the factory for repair.

For the division of sewage treatment, the report listed total expenditures in 1949 as $19,603.35, balance at the end of the year as $2,936.66.

"The cost of operation of the sewage plant and pumping station is approximately the same from year to year," Leist explained. "The principal item of the total is for salaries and labor."

Walcutt Seeks Election Again

Senator Roscoe R. Walcutt Friday announced his candidacy for nomination to succeed himself as state senator from the Tenth District, comprising Pickaway and Franklin Counties. During this session he is serving as leader of the Republican minority. During his four terms he has been a member at one time or another of practically every committee of the senate.

For four years he was chairman of the Ohio Postwar Program Commission. He has been consistently chosen by the legislative correspondents as one of the top ranking senators in the

Affections Lost; Worth $25,000

DAYTON, Jan. 20—Mrs. Ruth Pratt of Dayton is seeking $25,000 damages from Mrs. Ruth Bennett, 35, in an alienation of affections suit.

Mrs. Pratt charged yesterday in Montgomery County common pleas court that Mrs. Bennett spent $1,000 in cab fares over a period of two years while alienating the affections of her husband, Lowell Pratt, a cab driver.

Mrs. Bennett is the wife of John E. Bennett Jr., one of five members of the Bennett family indicted two months ago for selling $56,000 in unregistered oil stock to 40 prominent Dayton persons.

Columbus Relief Funds Depleted

COLUMBUS, Jan. 20—Franklin County and Columbus city officials meet today in an effort to work out the question of immediate aid for the county's moneyless welfare department.

The department ran out of money yesterday for direct relief in the city and county and still owes more than $187,000 in unpaid bills.

It was expected new funds would be taken from the general operating funds of the city and county.

Up till now, direct relief has been financed through excise taxes collected locally and state matching funds. No new excise tax payments are due before March 1.
